

STATEMENT BY THE GSLP/LIBERAL OPPOSITION

104/2008

30 September 2008

The latest uncontrolled outburst by the Government against the Opposition regarding what was said at the Opening of the Legal Year is both undignified and over the top. It is not worthy of the office of Chief Minister.

This is nothing more than another example of Mr Caruana having a tantrum and throwing the toys out of the playpen when the contradictions in his policies are exposed.

It is significant to note that Mr Caruana has had nothing to say on the substance of the argument put forward by the Opposition and that all he can do, once again, is launch a personal tirade against the Leader of the Opposition which smacks of desperation.

One would have thought that Mr Caruana would have been in a happier mood this week following the announcement that he has finally achieved his ambition and replaced the Chief Justice as the number two on the order of precedence for Gibraltar, so that he can arrive at parades and other official functions still behind the Governor but now before the Chief Justice!
